Another Week of Firsts!

As week 2 of Term 2 draws to a close, it has certainly been another week of firsts, including our first feature in The Newark Advertiser, the first use of our Chromebooks and a first glimpse of our brand new prospectus (see below).

The school aprons also got their first outing this week with a real hands-on lesson in Science. As some of you may have seen on Twitter, students have been creating their own 3D cell models as part of this term's unit of work on cells and organisms—and that has certainly meant getting their hands dirty! Students have been using a papier-mâché technique to create the casts and will next have to decide how they are going to create the internal layers and structures to build a 3D model of a plant or animal cell. Keep checking back for updates on their progress!

This week we also welcomed visitors from the DFE and ESFA for the first in a series of new-school monitoring visits and I am pleased to report that they were very impressed by the climate for learning in school. They were also really impressed by our Student Ambassadors—so well done to all those who took part.

And finally, we have reached the end of the first full week of Conduct Cards and it has been great to see so many students already needing extra space to record all their credits. Well done everyone!
