Brilliant Books and More!

This week we unveiled our new, upgraded library which contains all the books recommended by students who successfully completed the Suthers Reading Challenge earlier this year. Recommended titles include: Bad Dad by David Walliams, Dyslexia is My Super Power by Margaret Rooke and Ketchup Clouds by Annabel Pitcher—and it doesn't stop there; one lucky student walked away with a box full of books as the winner of our first ever prize draw and on Thursday, Miss Barker introduced the Brilliant Book Award, a scheme led by the Nottinghamshire Library Service and supported by The Bookcase at Lowdham. Through the scheme, Suthers School students will be teaming up with pupils from schools across Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire to choose a fiction book most worthy of the Brilliant Book Award 2018. Developing a love of reading is of course a great way to nurture imagination, inspire creativity and develop thinking skills— it is also a vital way of developing key literacy skills and to support all of our students in this, we are introducing 'My Literacy Guide' a handy reference book for students to use in all their lessons. Students will be bringing them home this week so please do have a look!

Students have also received reading logs this week. Parents will receive more information about this in a separate letter.

Prize Draw Winner!

Congratulations to Leo who received his box full of books in assembly on Thursday

This week, students have also been getting their imaginations in gear and penning entries for the 500 words story-writing competition run by BBC Radio 2
